Seth Keyser is a great example of implementing the disciplines of personal development. In all of my years of working with sales people and sales managers I have yet to find someone so committed to practicing the techniques of professional salesmanship and proving that those ideas work.

I am further impressed by Seth's desire to help other sales professionals to enjoy the same success he has in his sales career. He is truly interested in giving back to the sales community and developing others. I have tremendous faith in his ability to teach and mentor sales people and am honored to have him as part of my team.
